Weather of Concern

- Wet pattern will continue for several days ahead as waves of energy in the atmosphere bring several bouts of rain to the North Coast as well as the majority of Northern California

- The Sierras and colder Central Valley locations will continue to see heavy precipitation including periods of freezing rain

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

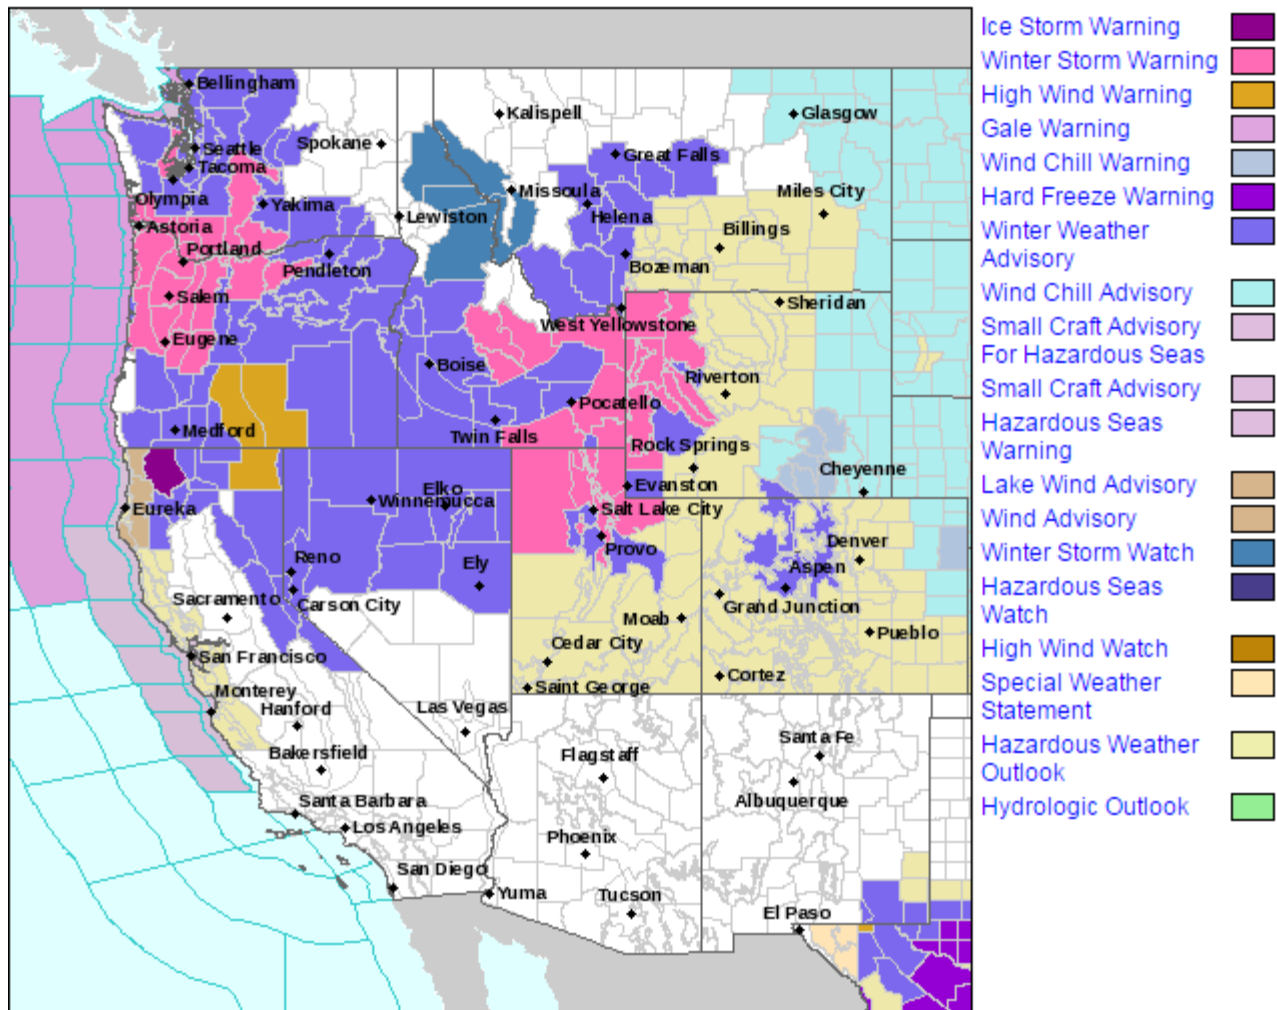

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Northern California will continue to experience strings of wet weather systems. Cold air is expected to linger in some of the valley areas and this will provide a chance of freezing rain to occur in such locations. Overall, however, the incoming systems will be warmer, and snow levels will rise quickly. Some gusty winds will develop ahead of this first incoming system. A short break between systems is expected Saturday before more precipitation starts on Sunday and lasts into the middle of next week. Westerly flow will become established over Northern California this weekend and last through early next week, and that makes it difficult to determine the details of when each system will arrive. For now, expect some periods of rather heavy precipitation early next week. All areas of Northern California ought to receive quite a bit of precipitation by the end of the next week, especially in the Northwest areas and the Eastern mountains. Snow levels could be as low as about 1000 feet early this morning, then will quickly rise to around 4500-5500 feet. The most significant snow accumulations will be from about 5500 feet and higher through this series of storms.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40% away from the deserts. Zonal flow will bring near normal temperatures to Southern California today and Friday, with mid 40s to mid 50s across the mountains and 60s to low 70s in the valleys. Showers will move across Central California through tomorrow night. Most locations from a Monterey/Fresno County line northward will receive between 1 and 2 inches of rainfall. Locations to the south will receive less than a half inch of rainfall, with little or no rainfall expected across Southern California. The snow level will be between 8,000 and 9,000 feet over the Sierra. Showers are expected to push just north of the region Saturday through early next week as a weak ridge pushes into Southern California from the southwest. Temperatures will warm to around 5 degrees above normal Sunday through early next week. The only wind of note through early next week will be westerly winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Friday afternoon through Saturday evening. Minimum humidity will be mainly above 30% Thursday through early next week.
